MEERESMUSEUM Stralsund

(Last updated: January 2022) The MEERESMUSEUM in Stralsund's historic city centre is housed in the former St. Catherine's Dominican Monastery built in 1251. This location is the oldest affiliate of the German Oceanographic Museum Foundation. The main hall of the church was subject to extensive renovations from 1972 to 1974, during which a unique metal frame was installed in the interior. The main hall was divided into three levels to provide space for the exhibits of the museum.

Until 2024 the MEERESMUSEUM will be modernised on a floor space of 7,500 m². Die Werft - Munich was contracted for exhibition design. The plans include a new structure for the main foyer, floor-to-ceiling exhibits, true-to-life models of marine animals and a large aquarium with a coral reef. The aquariums in the historic vaulted cellar of the monastery will be restructured to provide visitors again the opportunity to travel through the warm seas of our planet. Audiences favourites such as Marlene, the leatherback sea turtle, and the fin whale skeleton suspended from the arch of the former choir, will be presented again after the modernisation. The sea turtles will also continue to fascinate visitors while feeding and swimming in their 350,000 liter aquarium.

Reichel Schlaier Architekten in Stuttgart won the European-wide architectural competition for the modernisation of the MEERESMUSEUM in 2017. The winning design combines a careful approach to the museum's valuable historical structures with confident new architectural concepts - a balancing act between monument preservation in this world heritage site and the demands of a modern museum with a well-developed brand identity. The focus lies on sustainable building, including the energetic renovation of the aquariums. Furthermore, many improvements are planned to make visiting the MEERESMUSEUM even more enjoyable and to provide accessibility.

The entire modernisation project will cost approx. 40 million euros, with the German federal government investing 20 million euros and the state of
